SATURN RETURN THREE SATELLITE FILMS / PART 2

You will need Quicktime with H264 codec in order to view these films.

=====

In this package you will find two of the three SATELLITE FILMS by Lior Shamriz, created around his 2009 fiction film SATURN RETURNS:

RITENUTO (63 minutes, 2010)

A slowed down clip of a dream sequence from the film (one minute slowed down to 63 minutes), accompanied by a soundtrack of a mixtape with pop songs and some classical music pieces. The list of songs and melodies are at the end of the clip.

TITAN (43 minutes, 2010)

Imri Kahn reads two chapters from Kurt Vonnegut's "The Sirens of Titan" (1959): "In A Hollywood Nightclub" and "A Puzzle Solved". Accompanying his reading are publicly (internet) available images from the planet Saturn and some of its satellites, taken by NASA and the Symphony No.5 by Valentin Silvestrov in its entirety.

=====

IMPORTANT:

The films are suitable either for background home viewing ("Desktop Films") or for theatrical viewing:

You are allowed to just play the video on your desktop, then go back to what you were doing before (staring into space, for example), while leaving the films as a live desktop and occasionally glancing back at the screen.

You are, of course, also very encouraged to view the films as theatrical pictures, in which case you would sit and constantly stare at the motion picture, during the whole duration of the film.

=====

The first of the three films is RETURN RETURN (26 minutes). It will premiere in February 2010 at the 60th Berlin Film Festival, and will be released afterwards.
